Compromised Machine Notifications

A compromised machine is any device that is showing signs of being infected with a virus or other malicious software. This kind of software may be relatively benign in its behavior, such as popping up annoying advertisements on your screen, or it may be incredibly dangerous and capable of stealing your financial information, attacking other devices on the network, or worse.

Please visit the EITS website link below for more information:
https://eits.uga.edu/access_and_security/infosec/compromised_machine/

You will need to use your MyID username and password to access this page.